FOR $25,000 A YEAR

Campaign for Sustainment Fund Well Begun.

APPEAL TO THE COUNTRY

Aid Sought for New College of Political Sciences.

RICHARD D. HARLAN'S VIEWS

Speaking on Behalf of George Washington University Tells of Aim and Scope Proposed.

One of the most encouraging factors in the outlook for the George Washington University is the support which is being given by prominent men and firms in the different parts of the country to the new college of political sciences connected with the university. It is proposed to finance this college separately from the rest of the university. With this in view Dr. Richard D. Harlan, on behalf of the university, has appealed to the country at large for a sustenance fund of $25,000 a year for five years. When asked this morning as to the results of that campaign, Dr. Harlan said:

"Within the last few days, I have received subscriptions for $1,000 each from J. E. Morgan, Jr., and from Arthur Curtis James of Phelps, Dodge & Co., New York; also subscriptions of $500 each from three well known manufacturing firms in Rochester, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

"During the present college year, there has been paid in over $14,000 toward the proposed sustenance fund for the current year. Most of these subscriptions were annual and will, therefore, be available for the coming four years; even where the subscribers were unwilling to commit themselves definitely for the five-year period, most of them have said that they hoped to be able to renew their subscriptions from year to year."

The list of subscribers for this new College of Political Sciences contains the following notable names: J. Pierpont Morgan ($5,000), John Hay Hammond ($10,000), former Vice President of the Standard Oil Company, John D. Archbold of the Standard Oil Company, Judge Gary of the United States Steel Corporation, Otto H. Kahn and Paul Warburg of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

The subscriptions came from New York, Boston, Rochester, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Chicago. A one-thousand-dollar subscription from the South Carolina Manufacturing Association is a significant indication of the scope of this special movement. It is believed that similar organizations connected with American commerce abroad will also subscribe to this sustenance fund.

To Serve Local Community.

Dr. Harlan further said:

"Of course, the prime function and the supreme ambition of the George Washington University is to serve its own local community—to furnish to the young people of Washington, (1) the best possible general education by means of its College of the Liberal Arts and Sciences, and (2) the historic role of the university, and which, if I may change the figure, must always be the vital core of the whole institution; (3) to offer a practical and liberal education, as a means of livelihood, in the lines of education represented by our College of Engineering and the Mechanic Arts, our schools of law, medicine, dentistry and veterinary science and our new Teachers' College, which will soon become of incalculable value to the public schools of the District. As we are the only general, non-sectarian university in the District, and are so centrally located, we are therefore in a position to render yeoman service in the fields of higher and practical education to this important and growing population."

"The citizens of Washington are just beginning to understand the remarkable growth from the educational standpoint which the university has had within the last eight years, and it is infinitely to the credit of the institution that the financial problems now confronting it have been created by the lifting of the standards in all our departments and by the shifting of the entire university from the night school to the all-day basis."

Growth of the University.

"Here are some eloquent figures. Eight years ago we had 1,800 students; today there are over 1,500, a very respectable increase. But, when the figures are analyzed, the real advance is nothing short of remarkable. Eight years ago, out of the 1,800 students, only 71 were giving all their time to their college and university work; today we have over 800 giving their entire time to their education, with another 600 giving one-half of their time. Eight years ago we had only 10 teachers; today there are 44.

"The growth in the number of full-time students during the last five years has shown, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that there ought to be developed in the city of Washington a first-class university capable of meeting the manifold needs of the permanent residents of Washington, the growing number of retired army and navy officers and the large army of intelligent men, women, numbering over 34,000, who occupy minor positions in the government service, and whose slender salaries make it impossible to give their children either the ordinary college education or the practical forms of education just as the university can remain at home and get it at no expense beyond a moderate tuition fee.

"As a citizen of no mean city I do not doubt for a moment that the permanent residents of Washington and the business men who are interested financially in the city are fully justified in their institution will see to it that the work now being done shall be sustained on the high educational level of which it has been raised during the last five years.

"Our supreme desire is to serve this community. We are not bitten in the ambition to become a national university. But at the same time unless we enter one special field of service to the entire nation (the field represented by the college of political sciences) we would not be true to the immortal name now borne by this institution; and, by the way, our present title, 'The College of Political Sciences,' is a name which has been brought forth by the first charter of the old Columbian College in 1821.

Washington's Ardent Wish.

"When George Washington, in his last will and testament, solemnly bequeathed to his countrymen his ardent wish for the development of an important educational institution at the National Capital, and when he emphasized that same idea in his many public messages and private letters, the thing which bulked largest in his mind was the deepening of the national spirit and the greater unification of the republic, which would result from bringing together at the national representative young Americans from all sections of the land, for the purpose of studying the principles of politics and good government. In order to train men for the public service at home and abroad. For that reason, although the chief function of the George Washington University will always be local, the proposed sustenance fund of $25,000 a year for five years for its new college of political sciences can now be completed, such a college could render a large service to the entire American people.

As soon as the sustenance fund available for the coming academic year is increased by a comparatively small additional amount the trustees have authorized the appointment of a dean, or director, of the college of the political sciences. The dean will be a distinguished graduate of Johns Hopkins, who is a trained investigator in the field of the political sciences and a well known contributor to the literature of the subject. He has had a wide training in the government service and is peculiarly Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

(Incorporated by the State of New York. Stock Company)

JOHN R. HEGEMAN, PRESIDENT

GREAT REDUCTION OF EXPENSES--INCREASED BENEFITS--LOWER RATES

INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT

In January, 1907, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company largely increased the benefits in its Industrial policies by reason of a heavy reduction in expenses and improvement in mortality experience.

During the past three years the Company has steadily reduced its expenses, so that it is enabled to make a further increase in benefits. Industrial insurance policies have a unit of weekly premium—three cents, five cents and multiples thereof—and the amount of insurance varies with the age.

All Industrial Life policies (premiums cease after age 74). Endowment policies at age 80 and Adult Twenty-year Endowment.

Policies issued since Jan. 1, 1907, will be increased in benefits about ten per cent, according to a new table of benefits adopted for policies issued after July 1, 1909. In other words, not only does the Company issue a new table for policies hereafter issued, but it makes the increase retroactive since the present form of Limited Payment and Endowment at age 80 policies were adopted.

Upon the OLD INDUSTRIAL POLICIES the Company is paying out TWO AND A HALF MILLIONS OF DOLLARS IN BONUSES THIS YEAR, bringing up the total Bonuses and Concessions upon Industrial policies to EIGHTEEN MILLIONS OF DOLLARS IN SIXTEEN YEARS. This is OVER AND ABOVE ANY AND ALL OBLIGATIONS expressed or implied in the policies.

The Metropolitan in its Industrial Department has the lowest Ratio of Expense of all the Industrial Insurance Companies in the world which pay immediate benefits. In FIVE YEARS its

Ratio of Expense to Premium Income has been Reduced

8 per cent, representing an Annual Saving of Three and a Half Millions of Dollars

The new Convertible policy issued by the Company is a novel form of insurance which becomes fully paid-up life insurance in a few years and is then automatically converted into endowment insurance, the maturity of which is periodically shortened as payment of premiums continues.

The Company is abreast of the public demand for combination of term insurance and annuities, and serves the public better than any other agency. INDUSTRIAL POLICIES IN FORCE: NEARLY 9,500,000, INSURING NEARLY $1,500,000,000.

ORDINARY DEPARTMENT

The Company has reduced expenses six per cent in this Department in the last FIVE years—representing an ANNUAL SAVING OF OVER A MILLION AND A QUARTER OF DOLLARS IN THE ORDINARY DEPARTMENT.

The Company issues policies in the Ordinary Department in amounts from $500 to $1,000,000 upon all approved plans at the lowest rates. IN 1908 IT WROTE MORE PAID-UP BUSINESS IN ITS ORDINARY OLD LINE INSURANCE (exclusive of Industrial), in the United States and Canada, THAN ANY OTHER COMPANY.

All of its policies in the Ordinary as well as the Industrial Department are written on the non-participating plan. The Metropolitan pays its dividends at the start—that is to say, it cuts down the premiums. It believes the plain, common-sense men who make up the bulk of policy-holders look for a plain business contract. By plain business contracts we mean those which tell their whole story upon their face; which leave nothing to the imagination, borrow nothing from hope, require definite conditions and make definite promises in dollars and cents.

In both Departments combined the Company has, in each of the past fifteen years, written more paid-for insurance than any other company in the world.

The Company Upon Its Total Business Has in the Last Ten Years Reduced Its Ratio of Expenses to Premium Income Fifteen Per Cent.
